

COVID-19 FAQ: When Should I Self-Report?

Q: I have been fully vaccinated. Do I still have to self-report known exposure to COVID-19?

A: YES! Report this as soon as possible! Report this in the event there are additional steps the district needs to take.

Q: A member of my household is currently being tested for COVID-19. Do I need to report this as soon as I know a test is being administered OR wait until I know the results?

A: Report this as soon as possible! Timing can be very critical especially if other notifications or responses need to happen at a district level.

Q: I was just notified I might have been around someone that tested positive for COVID-19. Should I report this?

A: YES! Report this as soon as possible! Report this in the event there are additional steps the district needs to take.

Q: My child's daycare provider notified me that my son/daughter may have been exposed to COVID-19 but no one in my household is symptomatic. Do I report this?

A: YES! Though there may not be anything more to do than report it, this will allow us to be more prepared in the event the district needs to respond.

Q: My spouse was made aware that a coworker tested positive for COVID-19. Should I report this?

A: YES! Though there may not be anything more to do than report it, this will allow us to be more prepared in the event the district needs to respond.

Q: My child is running a 100.5 temperature. Should I report this?

A: Depends. There are many other viruses going around that it may be more beneficial to seek guidance from your family physician.

Q: I have a headache and an upset stomach, should I report this?

A: Depends. If you have had a possible exposure, then yes, please report it. If not, you may seek guidance from your family physician.

Q: I just traveled outside of the country, should I report this?

A: YES! Per current CDC guidelines, a self-quarantine could be warranted.